

BE BUNKER

*"This is the life.
I made it."*

My day at Be Bunker is power. After my early morning run, I am the first one to enter when the doors open. I have my protein shake and an espresso and move upstairs to The Office. I call my managers as I scan the headlines on my tablet. When my dad arrives for breakfast, I spend a few minutes with him before I order my car through my smartphone from The Valet Parking app. I am off to my first meeting. I am back for a quick lunch where I can check in on my mother. I then leave for another round of meetings and a more specialized triathlete workout. I generally meet my brother and his kids in The Library before dinner. Tonight we are eating at the only authentic restaurant we could find in the city. My day does not end there. I am meeting my Be Bunker friends for a special event in The Theater*. Although we all have different backgrounds, we all contribute to the discussion. Although I consider them friends first, I know they are also excellent business partners. Together we have built new businesses, made the right investments, and are now starting our own philanthropic program. As I leave Be Bunker for the day, I think to myself, "this is life. I made it."

I know Be Bunker is sharp value. The price of my espresso and top quality protein shakes. The cost of all that organic, gluten-free food for my family. The private facilities. My daily massage. The speakers they bring in. The valet service and locker rooms. The warm temperature controlled rooms. The latest office furniture. Everything spotless, available from my smartphone, and personalized*. For what I pay per month, this is the best price to product value on my credit card.
